Melwin Marvin Lawman was born on April 26, 1927 in Minneapolis, MN. He grew up "Northeast" where he spent his youth having adventures with his three brothers, playing hockey, and taking care of his little sister. Mel's passion for hockey began in his youth and carried him into adulthood. After graduating from Edison High School in 1945, he served in the U.S. Navy until WWII ended and was honorably discharged.

After returning home from the service, he attended the University of Minnesota and studied engineering for one year while working for Strandine's Meat Market. He left the U of M and Al Strandine trained him as a meat cutter. He eventually left Strandine's and continued his career at Red Owl where he retired in 1989.

Mel met the love of his life, Joyce Abelson, at Strandine's Meat Market. They were married February 11, 1950, and had four children: Larry, Deanna, Dennis and Doug. Mel loved being a dad, grandpa and great-grandpa.

Besides work and family, the cabin brought Mel so much joy. The construction of the Lawman cabin on Ann Lake in Ogilvie, MN began in 1946. From the beginning, it was home away from home. Over the years as the family grew, the cabin became the center of many memorable summers.

Mel will always be remembered for his love of family, the great stories he told, the fish he caught, his love of hockey, and competitive bowling until the age of 87.

The people who greet Mel in heaven will remember him as many things: a husband, a father, a patriarch, a hockey player, an enthusiastic fisherman, and a man of faith whose stern exterior held a tender spirit. Mel will have something important to tell everyone,

"The fish in Ann Lake no longer fear for their lives."
